Casey Mitchell has been developing human potential and working in the field of professional learning and development for twenty years. She believes that people naturally want to succeed and when given the right environment and nutrients, they can and do flourish. One of her greatest joys is inspiring others to discover and learn.

Casey's background includes human resource development manager for Marshalls Department Stores where she was responsible for the education, training, and development of field and staff management nationwide.

Casey demonstrates a wide range of expertise in consulting, facilitating, and training design and delivery. She designs and delivers programs that are learner-centered and performance-based. Casey is a strong communicator and skilled facilitator who engages her audience fully and challenges them to become actively involved in their own learning. Casey brings a wealth of management experience to the classroom and can relate to the challenges faced by her audience. Her programs are facilitated with energy, wisdom, and good humor. Casey also has experience as a skilled desktop publisher who creates professional-grade course materials.

Casey has worked with a variety of companies, including Comcast, Federal Reserve Bank, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Mercury Computer, Raytheon, Self Esteem Boston Educational Institute, and Wiley-Blackwell Publishing.

Casey is also an instructor with Boston University Corporate Education Center and Northeastern University School of Professional and Continuing Studies. She designs and delivers professional development programs to organizations and in public seminars in the greater Boston area.

Casey earned a BA in English from Rivier College in Nashua, New Hampshire. She is a member of the American Society for Training and Development and the New Hampshire Writers' Project. Casey is interested in good conversation, movies and books, writing fiction, and anyone who can make her laugh. She is also writing a children's book, realizing a life-long dream.
